they have entered since 2011. In May they took home the trophy from the 2014 Youth Step USA National Step Championship and the title of best youth step team in the country.

41st City Council Takes Oaths, Seats at Charter Meeting Nov. 9

by James Giese

The purpose of the Charter Meeting of the Greenbelt City Council, required every two years following the city council election, is to swear in the newly elected council and for the council to elect one of its members as mayor. The process follows a well-established script dating back beyond the memories of just about all current residents. Since the newly elected council was the previously elected council and all have served together for six years and most have been on council even more years, you would think they would get it right. And for the most part they did. But when it came to taking the oath, most members stumbled one way or another.

The taking of the oath ceremony requires the former mayor, Emmett Jordan (not yet chosen to be mayor once more), to administer the oath with the others repeating the words he says. First there was the false start that began with the members repeating "I (state your name), do hereby . . ." Only Judith Davis remembered to give her name. Then, after City Manager Michael McLaughlin asked Jordan to use a different microphone, the ceremony proceeded more successfully the second time.

But some members still had difficulty in repeating the words former Mayor Jordan administered. With their informal remarks picked up on open microphones, one commented that councilmembers should really memorize the oath in advance. Another complained about the difficulty in reciting the word particularity (administer the office without particularity or prejudice) and felt that it should be two words.

Temporary Chair

Then there was the selection of a temporary chair to conduct the meeting. Silke Pope promptly nominated the longest-tenured member, Edward Putens, but for a long moment there was no second. Then the dawn came and several members at once seconded. Following a vote in which Putens expressed thoughts about dissenting, Jordan handed Putens the gavel.

Draft FBI Environmental Study Released; Greenbelt Fares Well

by James Giese

The General Services Administration (GSA) has released the draft Environmental Impact Study (EIS) analyzing the three proposed sites for the new Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) headquarters. It is posted on line at gsa.gov/portal/content/192223. The Greenbelt Planning Department is reviewing the document and City Manager Michael McLaughlin has announced that the matter will most likely be placed on the agenda for discussion by the Greenbelt City Council at the December 14 regular meeting.

In a cursory review of the document, Garth E. Beall, legal manager for developers A.H. Smith Greenbelt Management, LLC and Renard Development Company, LLC, relayed to the city that the draft study found the Greenbelt Metro Station site would have the least impact on area roads, require the fewest parking spaces for the facility and offered the best mass transit of the three sites under consideration. Only Greenbelt would not require shuttle bus service to the planned facility. If the project is included in the President's December budget and funds are appropriated, a bid for construction of the new facility could be awarded as early as November 2016.

Draft EIS

Beall reported that "the draft EIS projects FBI peak hour vehicle trips at 1,100 in the a.m. and 1,015 in the p.m.," approximately half of the peak hour trips that the developers had modeled in its traffic study. "Total traffic for the FBI and the mixed use development is projected by GSA to be 1,785 a.m. trips and 1,816 p.m. trips. The Landover site (the former Landover Mall at Landover Road and the Capital Beltway) is projected to have 2,196 a.m. trips and 2,030 p.m. trips," Beall said. He concluded that "Landover (without having 1.6 million square feet of mixed use development as is proposed for Greenbelt) generates 23 percent more traffic in the morning and 12 percent more traffic in the evening."

"Total FBI parking, including visitors, at Greenbelt will be 3,735. At Landover, the number is 7,623 (more than double)," Beall reported.

Beall also quoted the draft EIS as stating that the "fence line excludes Indian Creek stream channels and wetlands, and facility development excludes wetlands and floodplains. The entire riparian area would be preserved as a security easement." This aspect is of interest to the city as it wishes to provide a pedestrian pathway from the Franklin Park apartments and Greenbelt Station to the Metro station development through the Indian Creek woodland area.

In an earlier October 18 memorandum to the city released by the city at the same time as his latest, Beall reported that instead of a lease, GSA was seeking an appropriation for the project for inclusion in the President's December budget and, although "challenges existed," this was thought to be the best procedure to follow. "It seems that GSA now has a clear plan to move forward and strong support to do so. I was pretty concerned that the solicitation could become mired in government red tape. GSA's actions alleviate those concerns at least for now," Beall told the city.

Schedule

Beall also informed the city of the latest schedule set forth by GSA for the project. Already completed in this schedule was the October 14 notification to the Phase 1 request for proposal (RFP) bidders as to which proposals were successful and still under consideration and which bidders had been excluded. Beall said there were two bidders excluded at that time. Also completed this month was the draft EIS.

Next month GSA is to issue Phase 2 RFPs to be sent to the Phase 1 successful bidders. The initial responses from those bidders will be due back in May 2016, with final responses due in September 2016. GSA is to publish its final EIS in October 2016. If funds become available, a contract will be awarded in November 2016.

Letters to the Editor

Congratulations

I write to congratulate my local government colleagues in Greenbelt on their re-election this month. The citizens of Greenbelt saw fit to return their entire city council this election. The City will continue to be served well by their leadership and experience.

I also want to personally congratulate all the members of the Greenbelt City Council – Mayor Emmett V. Jordan, Mayor Pro Tem Judith F. Davis, Edward V.J. Putens, Rodney M. Roberts, Konrad Herling, Leta Mach and Silke Pope on their re-election. I look forward to working with them and continuing the good work of the council on the important issues facing Greenbelt and Prince George’s County. We can take the November 3 results as an affirmation of the good job council has done over the past two years.

I hope the residents of Greenbelt enjoy the upcoming Thanksgiving and holiday season and I wish all a great start to 2016. I again thank the citizens of Greenbelt for allowing me to serve you this past year.

Todd M. Turner, Prince George’s County Councilmember – 4th District

THANKS

I am deeply honored that the citizens of Greenbelt have returned me once more to the city council. My gratitude also goes to those who contributed generously to my campaign and worked so hard on my behalf, especially those who have supported me for over 22 years. I pledge to do my very best to serve all the citizens of Greenbelt with renewed energy and enthusiasm. I congratulate all those elected to city council and look forward to working with them in meeting the challenges our city will certainly face in the next two years. I remain, as always, “Committed to Community.”

The New Deal Café Celebrates 20 Years

The New Deal Café held a celebration for our 20th anniversary on Sunday, November 8. Scores of our supporters and friends reveled in a six-hour love fest. Mere words are inadequate to describe the joyful and spiritual experience of all who came together to rejoice in the life of the New Deal Café.

We were honoring the past, delighting in the present and looking ahead to the future. Throughout our 20 years, we have thrived with the support of volunteers, members and other patrons of the Café. For that, we are deeply grateful.

During the celebration, we rocked to four incredible bands, The Bachelor and the Bad Actress, 49 Cent Dress, Cold Hard Cash and The Cousin John Band. The musical highlight of the evening was the premier performance of a song written about and dedicated to the New Deal Café arranged by David O’Brien and written by O’Brien, Rob Petrie, Geff King, John Mobley, Hillary Gottenmoeller, Joe Harris, Melissa Orr and Jamie Krauk.

We were enthralled and educated by hearing stories of the Café’s life journey from Pat Brent and Peggy Barott, two of the Café’s pioneers. They spoke about the life of the Café from its birth in December 1995 as a weekend venue housed in the Community Center to our current home in Roosevelt Center. We were graced with the beautiful creations of Barbara Stevens, another of the Café’s life-long supporters, whose art is currently being shown at the Café.

In hearing our life story, we are reminded that we have continued to grow through good times and tough times with the hard work and dedication, as well as critical financial support when needed, of hundreds of volunteers. We want to honor those volunteers and recognize their heartfelt and selfless contributions.

When the Cold War Heated Up

Opening at Old Greenbelt Theatre on Friday, November 13 is Bridge of Spies, a history-anchored tour de force carried forward by director Steven Spielberg, Tom Hanks and the Coen brothers as principal writers. In 1957, Soviet spy Rudolf Abel was arrested in Brooklyn, and a CIA U2 spy plane was shot down over the USSR. Lawyer James B. Donovan (the measured Hanks) was enlisted to defend Abel (Mark Rylance), while a plan was hatched to exchange him for downed U2 pilot Francis Gary Powers. The two sides joust in close maneuvering against the Cold War’s weighty backdrop.

Backstroke Visions

For 22 years I have been doing the backstroke in the Greenbelt indoor pool, never realizing the roof was yellowing. With our beautifully redone facility, it seems impossible not to have noticed, with the now exceptionally warm glow of the new ceiling. I too am grateful to the city for the project. It came in on time, often difficult for a construction project, what with weather and such. I am amazed and impressed that it was the same company and a number of the same workers that created the indoor pool 22 years ago or at least the marvelously lit-by-the-sun roof, who did the work again.

The staff at the Greenbelt Aquatic and Fitness Center (GAFC) have been so helpful, communicative and patient during what has been a stressful time for a bunch of folks.

Greenbelt is an inclusive community and that is visible in pool patronage. Many of us are quite dependent on the facility, perhaps addicted to the pool might not even be too strong a phrase. We are a diverse bunch, and shared the commonality of missing the use of the facility.

It is a pleasure to be back, see fellow recreaters or athletes, commiserate on how we made it through the down time, and while doing our water exercising, cheerily catch up.

The GAFC staff is terrific. A round of applause for them! Kudos to those in the city who facilitated this well executed project.

Greenbelt sure is great!

Democratic Club Meets

by Nicole Williams

On November 20 the Roosevelt Democratic Club will have a conversation about reproductive justice and the attacks against Planned Parenthood. Two well-known activists, Diana Philips, executive director of NARAL Pro-Choice Maryland, and Jacqueline Ayers, legislative director for Planned Parenthood Federation of America, will speak.

Ayers is responsible for leading the strategic direction of Planned Parenthood's federal policy priorities on Capitol Hill, where she coordinates the lobbying staff and oversees the implementation of proactive and responsive legislative strategies and development resources for the national organization and its affiliates across the country. Prior to joining Planned Parenthood she was the legislative director for the National Urban League. She holds a bachelor's degree in mass communication and government from Western Kentucky University and obtained her law degree from the Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law.

Philips has been working in public interest law and nonprofit organizations for over 25 years on issues involving gender-based reproductive justice and civil liberties. She has served as North Texas regional director for the American Civil Liberties Union. She simultaneously served as Director of the National Coalition of Abortion Providers and the Abortion Conservation Project, while launching the Abortion Care Network in Washington DC. She holds a B.A. in criminal justice and sociology from Indiana University and an M.S. in women's and gender studies from Towson University.

In addition to our distinguished speakers we will announce the slate of candidates running for leadership positions within the club for the 2016 year.

In December we will hold our elections and celebrate the holidays.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the Greenbriar Condominium Terrace Room located at 7600 Hanover Parkway.

GHI's Fee-deferral Program Is Approved for Low-income

by Glen Charlton

The Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) board voted to establish a fee-deferral program for members of the co-op at the last meeting held on November 5.

The program allows deferral of the monthly co-op payment for the cost of crawl space work during the Homes Improvement Program, according to a document provided by GHI at the meeting.

The program would benefit low-income co-op members, as the income requirement for eligibility does not exceed a gross income of $24,000.

Discussion of the fee-deferral program has been ongoing since August, according to a manager's memorandum prepared by Eldon Ralph, the general manager of GHI.

A motion to approve the fee-deferral program failed at the board meeting held on October 15 to a 3 to 3 vote.

The motion failed because some board members, including Vice President Susan Ready, did not agree on a specific detail of the fee-deferral policy: interest rate. The policy stated that members would be charged an interest rate equal to 1 percent over the average rate earned from GHI's investment in corporate bonds.

Since the October 15 meeting, a fee-deferral program task force was formed and its members suggested changes to the policy, which were presented in a revised draft at the November 5 meeting.

This revision replaced the 1 percent interest rate with a $100 origination fee.

A member is responsible for paying the origination fee if they qualify for deferral, but can opt to include the $100 in the monthly amount deferred.

Ready moved to amend the $100 origination fee and change it to $69.

Bill Jones, a member of the board, insisted that, "$100 is as low as the origination fee can get."

Ready said, "We need to get this passed, but we got to get it passed the right way."

President Steve Skolnik agreed with Ready and said, "The board doesn't want anyone to not be able to stay in their home because of the fee."

Ready's motion failed by a vote of 4 to 4.

The fee-deferral policy was passed in its revised form, with no changes to the origination fee amount, by a vote of 5 to 3. Co-op member Philip Payette weighed in on the approved motion.

"I am not in favor of it," said Payette.

"There's a possibility of [members] getting evicted from their unit and it just leaves a bad taste in my mouth. They [GHI] would be profiting from people's loss," said Payette.

Members must apply by January 31, 2016, to be considered for the fee-deferral program.

The reelection of Jordan was pro forma. Traditionally, in a display of unity and harmony, the second highest vote-getter nominates the highest, who once again was Jordan and Davis performed this task graciously. Upon being unanimously reelected, Jordan made his way from the dais to the floor to take his oath as mayor. Putens announced that he was not going to hand over the gavel to the new mayor just yet. “Last time I did it too soon,” he said.

Once Deputy Clerk of the Circuit Court Rita Robinson administered the mayor’s oath which Jordan repeated without a hitch, Putens gave up the gavel. But only after the two men paused for a photo op.

There quickly followed the council designation of second-highest vote-getter Davis as mayor pro tem.

Thanks

Next were the customary remarks by each councilmember, beginning with Jordan and in order of votes achieved. Generally, each thanked the voters for voting for them, their loyal supporters, donors and campaign workers, the other candidates for making the election challenging and city staff and Board of Elections for the conduct of the election.

In his remarks, Jordan urged the councilmembers to work together for another successful term. Davis expressed optimism that an improving economy would enable the city to continue to make Greenbelt a viable place in which to live, work and play. An emotional Pope told of an encounter at the Co-op earlier in the day in which she told a resident that she still had to prepare her remarks and was told to just speak from her heart as she always did. She acknowledged that while she had learned much during her service on council there was still much she could learn in the coming term.

Konrad Herling said his goal was to bring the various sectors of Greenbelt divided by major roads closer together through a circulator bus system and possibly more overpasses. Leta Mach noted that this year she could not accurately measure the number of steps she took in door-to-door campaigning (she thought over 200,000) because of pedometer failure. Economic development and the possible relocation of the FBI headquarters to Greenbelt would be the two major issues of the upcoming term, she thought.

Rodney Roberts, speaking extemporaneously while quoting the words of Franklin Roosevelt, said he wanted to continue to strive to further the ideal that generated Greenbelt by continuing to make it a place where people can enjoy a life of quality without having a lot of money. Putens, also speaking emotionally on his being reelected to his 18th term of office, said that all he had wanted to say had been said by those who spoke before him.

Last Item

The last item of business was for the mayor to assign seats at the council table, a charter requirement assigned to him. He noted that the charter provided that any two councilmembers dissatisfied with the arrangement could switch seats. Here again, tradition prevailed. The mayor sat at the center. Davis, as mayor pro tem, sat to his left. Pope, the next highest vote-getter in the election, was assigned the seat to the mayor’s right. The left-right, left-right system for the other members was followed with Herling, then Roberts, on the left and Mach, then Putens, on the right.

Mach’s motion then moved “that we adjourn for cake,” was quickly seconded and approved. The members of council then joined their family members, friends and loyal Greenbelters, some 35 in all, in celebratory conversation with cake and punch.

Artist Reception At New Deal

On Sunday, November 15 from 3 to 5 p.m., there will be a public reception at the New Deal Café for Barbara Stevens, whose show, Barbara Stevens Art: Retrospective Part One and New Work/Where we are in the Universe/Greenness/Human Pattern Recognition, is on exhibit at the Café for the months of November and December.
There are nearly 50 pieces of art in this show – a year's worth of work. Some are new paintings on canvas and there are older works, changed digitally and produced as canvas prints, then painted on the canvas prints. These are in a sense new works from old work. Much of the show is framed multimedia, using technology to change things, followed by lots of cutting and pasting, printing and then painting, then printed again.
Stevens received a master's in art at University of California, Berkeley and taught art in Maryland and in York, Pa., in the 1960s. She taught art at the college level in New Mexico through the 1980s and in the 1990s at Prince George's Community College. She had a studio and taught art at Montpelier Art Center and produced green paintings there and later taught art and had a studio at the Greenbelt Community Center.
The art exhibit program at the New Deal Café is sponsored by the Friends of New Deal Cafe Arts with support from the City of Greenbelt.

Reel and Meal Presents Lunch Hour Film

On Monday, November 16, Reel and Meal at the New Deal Café will partner with the Physician’s Committee for Responsible Medicine to present the documentary Lunch Hour.

Lunch Hour examines America’s national school lunch program which exposes children to unhealthy but culturally-acceptable foods at a young age. School officials, politicians, physicians and celebrities such as Rachel Ray, Robin Quivers, Marion Nestle, Senator Kirsten Gillibrand and more offer their views of the challenges and the solutions to this problem. Additionally, a USA Today investigative journalist shares facts based on many in-depth investigations done by the newspaper, where shocking information is revealed about what food our next generation is eating on a daily basis.

Discussion will be led by Dr. Angela Eakin, a family medicine physician with a strong background in nutrition and dietetics. Her practice is focused on prevention and management of chronic disease for all stages of life and the important role that nutrition plays in prevention and management of disease.

The Physician’s Committee for Responsible Medicine is committed to encouraging prevention of chronic diseases such as diabetes, heart disease, obesity and cancer through empowering people and providing education. They have partnered with Reel and Meal to provide a screening of Lunch Hour to help promote a change in school lunches.

Reel and Meal is a monthly film series focused on environmental, social justice and animal rights issues. The series has three organizing groups: Beaverdam Creek Watershed Watch Group, Green Vegan Networking and the Prince George’s County Peace & Justice Coalition.

The optional vegan buffet begins at 6:30 p.m. and the free film screening starts at 7 p.m. For more information on this month’s event, contact Susan Barnett at susnbarn@earthlink.net or 301-474-7465.

Co-op Explains Year’s Loss; Expects to Rebound in 2016

by Amy Hansen

The Greenbelt Co-op Supermarket and Pharmacy lost about $140,000 last year but so far this year the store is running in the black, Manager Bob Davis reported at the Co-op’s annual meeting on November 7.

Speaking to a crowd of about 100 people, Davis explained that the Co-op’s biggest issue was their supplier, Associated Wholesalers Inc., which filed for bankruptcy without warning last year and forced the grocery store management to start searching for another supplier. Vetting a supplier takes time, Davis said, but food still has to come into the store. For about five months, the Co-op used short-term contracts, which meant they were paying more for the supplies, but keeping their options open. “During that time we made a decision to not raise the prices,” Davis said.

At the beginning of January, the Co-op signed a five-year agreement with a new contractor, C&S, and have been pleased with the increased variety of food and programming available.

Davis said he is cautiously optimistic that they will make up the loss before the end of this fiscal year. Board Chairperson Barbara Ford said the board was appreciative of Davis’ performance over the last year. “We have a true gladiator,” she said. “We are impressed with how he used his 32 years of experience to navigate this difficult year.”

In other news, patrons concerned about a sustainable future presented a letter challenging the Co-op to divest from such things as plastic clamshell containers. Davis said he had received the letter two days earlier and had contacted his supplier to talk about alternatives to the items listed.

Dark Comedy Foursome Shines at Arts Center

by Jim Link

Risa (Jill Vanderweit) is sternly rebuked by her husband Lenny (Bob Kleinberg) in Any Given Monday.

Whipsmart dialogue delivered with spot-on timing by four accomplished actors makes for a rich theater experience at Greenbelt Arts Center, where Any Given Monday is playing.

This very knowing, edgy, dark comedy explores issues of racial injustice, economic inequality, Jewish identity, Catholic idiosyncrasies, marital infidelity, philosophical reasoning and the superiority of the Philadelphia Eagles over the New York Giants and Dallas Cowboys. (The Washington Redskins aren't even mentioned.)

At its heart, though, lies the question, "When is murder excusable?"

His good buddy Mickey joins him, urges him to man up, never forgive his philandering wife, Risa, and get a life of his own.

Lenny's daughter Sarah urges her dad to assert himself in various ways, stop being a doormat and let her mom come back home.

Narcissistic Risa returns and is shocked to find a bold new Lenny as master of his man cave.

This skeletal plot is deliciously complicated by Mickey's stunning revelation that he has murdered Frank, Risa's (unseen) Lothario, as a favor for Lenny!

All four actors really shine.

Mike Larson as Mickey, the street-smart, visceral, racist, Irish-American subway worker is menacing and hilarious. Always fiercely politically incorrect, he asserts that, "America is the only country in the world that has fat homeless people." And of Lenny's way too genteel civility, he says, "You're the only guy I know who steps out of the shower to take a pee."

His obtuse confidence that the end justifies the means – Frank deserved what he got – is hard to refute even by Sarah, the 20-ish philosophy major who spouts Wittgenstein and Anne Frank, and has her bookish rigid certainties shaken by Mickey's "courage" in acting rather than merely theorizing. Sarah K. Scott is excellent as this morally earnest quasi-ingenue who dearly loves her dad and coaches him to defy Risa when she returns. Lenny's response to Risa's "Poor Frank!" is hilarious and unrepeatable in a family newspaper.

Jill Vanderweit is wonderfully convincing as Risa, jolted out of her airy smugness into a new appreciation of Lenny's strong integrity. Her wine-saturated, self-pitying monologue is a mini-tour de force.

Absolutely crucial is Bob Kleinberg's very impressive, layered, nuanced performance as Lenny. It's a real pleasure to watch him gradually morph from Prufrockian timidity into a swaggering lord of the manor. Or at least of his Philly apartment.

Those excellent collaborators Ann Lowe-Barrett (director) and William Powell, Jr. (producer) have nailed it again.

See Any Given Monday from November 13 to November 22, Fridays/Saturdays at 8 p.m. and Sundays at 2 p.m.

New Shelter Cat Rooms Are a Purr-fect Hangout

The boxes provide a secure place to snuggle for kittens and cats alike. Below, Ernie the cat supervises volunteer Lutz Rastaetter as he installs cat boxes.

On Sunday, November 8 volunteers installed hand-made wooden "cat boxes" in two of the cat rooms at the City of Greenbelt Animal Shelter. The renovations maximize the use of the vertical space in the cat rooms and make them more appealing to cats and shelter visitors alike. Shelves and scratching posts will be added in the coming weeks.

Volunteers designed and built multiple wooden boxes with window openings to give each cat a place of its own to hang out and relax. Once the boxes were on the walls, cats and kittens explored and settled in to the new accommodations, giving a resounding "paws up!"

Well-Wishers for the Animals of the Greenbelt Shelter (WAGS) held several fundraisers in 2015 raising money for materials and welcomes additional donations, which can be sent to WAGS, P.O. Box 1672, Greenbelt, Md. 20768-1672 or submitted online at go-fundme.com/GBAnimalShelter.

The shelter is located at 550A Crescent Road. Phone: 301-474-6124. Website: greenbeltnmd.gov/animalshelter. It is open to visitors on Wednesdays, 4 to 7 p.m., and Saturdays 9 a.m. to noon.
